PRINCE IMPERIAL OF GERMANY

Heir Apparent an All-Around Athlete-Has High Respect for His Rank.

BY WILLIAM E. CURTIS. Written for The Star and the Chicago Record-The people of Berlin are still talking about Roosevelt, who made a profound impression upon the mind of Germany. Many of the old martinets did not like his hit or miss enthusiasm and his free and easy democratic manners, which have been roughly criticised at the military club, but no one has ever dared to utter an unfriendly word in the presence of the easy democratic manners, which have kaiser, who was more eager to meet him than any other man in Europe, and got more satisfaction out of his visit. Sev-eral funny stories are told about their en-counters. The emperor himself boasts with gusto that Roosevelt told him he was the only king he saw in Europe "who looked | as if he could carry his own ward." He considered this a very great compliment. The incident occurred on the last day of Roosevelt's visit and at their farewell interview. The great war lord and the colonel of the Rough Riders were throwing bouquets at each other when the kaiser urged the colonel to remain in Germany and accept a commission in his army. The colonel retorted by advising the kaiser to emigrate to America, where a great field of usefulness was awaiting im. He was confident, he said, that the kaiser would make a great hit in the

"Do you think I might succeed in poli-tics?" inquired the greatest of the Hohen-new world.

"Sure!" answered Roosevelt, "you are the only king I ever met that acted as if he could carry his own ward." One of the American professors who has been lecturing at Berlin University asked the kaiser how he got along with "People who saw us together said we were just like a couple of windmills," re-plied his majesty.

View of the Empress.

The Empress Augusta, who does not understand English very well and has a limited sense of humor and great respect never seen his like before, and regarded everything that Roosevelt did with wonder. She was very hospitable and cordial and all that sort of thing, but was not up to his jokes and is not used to such familiarities as occurred between the two great men. She said that her imperial husband and his American guest "made a great deal of clatter."

The emperor has been making some very sensational speeches this fall. Not long ago in presenting a cross to a Benedictine abbey at Beuron he said: "The twentieth century has let loose deas the struggle against which can only successfully be carried through with the help of religion and the support of heaven. That is my firm conviction. The crown I wear can be worn only because it rests upon the word and the person of the Lord. As a symbol of this I present a cross to this church, to show that the governments of Christian princes must be founded upon the teachings of Jesus, and that they must help to strengthen the religious spirit which is inborn in the German race and to increase the reverence of my subjects for the altar and the throne. Those are one and the same thing. They belong one to the other and cannot be separated." When a regiment of recruits was mustered into the army at Potsdam not long ago the emperor told them that no man could be a good soldier unless he prayed for the grace and the guidance of God, and he commanded them to say the Lord's preyer every morning. He said that it ought to be one of the army regu-lations. He has made a similar speech on several occasions lately, and no one would be surprised if he should issue an order to have prayers at roll call every morning wherever there is a garrison.

An Incident in Point.

This reminds me of an incident that occurred several years ago. One Sunday morning in a sermon delivered to the sailors of the imperial yacht the emperor declared that "only good Christians could become successful soldiers," and enlarged this aphorism for several minutes. When the sermon was published, as all his majesty's sermons are, a cartoon appeared in riors out of hades because under the emperor's theory they were not entitled to be there and directing them to go up to

The editor was tried and convicted of lese-majeste and sentenced to imprisonment for two months for this reflection upon his majesty's Christian principles. Great saw a cartoon of himself on a installation as rector magnificentissimus command his servants "Tiefer hangen"— appropriateness. It was the first public (hang it lower down) so that he could see the lampoon more plainly. His sense of every thoughtful man in Germany was humor was much keener than that of the favorably impressed with the utterances what they liked as long as they permitted him to do what he liked. William II is not so sensitive as he he admitted that they might have their
